Technology, Japan, Monbukagakusho) Scholarship for the Doctoral Program to Enhance a Network of Collaborative Human Resources for Sustainable Socio-Economic Development in Post-COVID-19 Asia

Graduate School of International Development (GSID) Nagoya University, Japan

I. OUTLINE

1. Aim and Mission of the Program

(1) Aim

The aim of the program is to develop government officials and academics who will formulate industrial policy to promote sustainable economic growth and propel development of the private sector in their countries, and thereby contribute to the building of a new and more resilient society after the COVID-19 crisis. Through this program, GSID will train administrative officers and academic scholars who are endowed with the expertise to assist the industrial growth of their countries and take the initiative to achieve economic development, contributing to the further expansion of networks of development professionals.

(2) Mission

The program has a mission to offer opportunities to deepen and systematize the knowledge of persons who hold a master's degree in international development or related fields, in order to develop high-level skills and the ability to negotiate with international institutions and foreign governments from a global viewpoint and make a contribution to policy-making for the sustainable economic development and post COVID-19 society of their countries in Asia. This program is designed to provide international students from countries in Asia with skills and knowledge which modern Japan obtained from developed nations and adapted for its economic growth.
